TRAINING ACTIVITIES

Throughout the ArchTech project life, several training activities were implemented with the purpose of bringing the youth workers closer to the project results content that upskills them, as well as the use of tools that bring young people closer to built heritage. The training has also focused on strategies and good practices that have used heritage as a means to foster inclusion, increase the sense of belonging as the desire to protect and preserve local heritage.

Other results have built narratives of built heritage that bring young people closer not only to the architectural and historical elements of the buildings but also to curious stories related to them, urban legends (whether they may be true or not) or just fun facts.

The narratives (as all ArchTech results) may be found in the Building Alert App, which may be downloaded for free or in the project's website:

In-site visits to built heritage site for higher engagement

The Archtech Team made efforts to also illustrate the training content and to spark discussion using hands-on methods. For this reason training and other events were intertwined with guided visits in different partner countries. In Larnaca, Cyprus the participants had the chance to visit the historic neighbourhood of Chrysopolitissa, in Malta a visit to the neoclassical and beautiful Villa Bighi as part of the Modular Training for Youth Workers. Similarly, in the framework of the same activity, the trainees in Albacete, Spain visited The Fontecha Villa which contains much of the city's life within its walls.

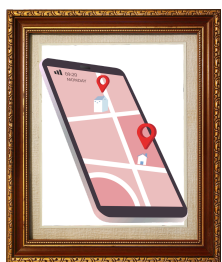

In Larissa, Greece as part of the final project event, the participants will have the chance to go on a guided promenade to the city's main heritage and historical sites.
